New Sustainability Minor Advisor

IonE Director Jon Foley's Spring 2013 Course: "Can We Feed the World Without Destroying It?"

Spring 2013 Electives in Sustainability

New Sustainability Minor Advisor

The Sustainability Studies team has a new addition! Lauren McCarthy is the new Sustainability Studies Minor Advisor. Lauren is also the scholarship coordinator for CFANS and has experience with scholarships, orientation services, and Honors students from the University of Iowa. She has a BA in Political Science and International Studies from the University of Iowa and a MPhil in Latin American Studies. Feel free to contact Lauren with any questions regarding the minor or if you are interested in meeting with her. You can reach her at lfmcart@umn.edu or (612)626-5602. For more information on advising and enrollment in the Sustainability Studies Minor, consult our website!
IonE Director Jon Foley's Spring 2013 Course: "Can We Feed the World Without Destroying It?"

This spring, the Institute on the Environment's Director, Jon Foley, is teaching an Honors course that will address the long-awaited question, "Can we feed the world without destroying it?" This course will focus on the global food crisis, through exploring the surrounding issues and challenging students to create solutions. This course is open to both Honors and non-Honors students, for more information about the course, or how to receive a permission number, check out our website!

Spring 2013 Electives in Sustainability

Check out our website for a one-stop-shop to answer all of your registration questions for the Sustainability Studies Minor. Check out our blog for new and exciting electives being offered with a sustainability theme, as well as information about core courses and pre-approved sustainability electives. Don't forget about our Sustainability Course Search Tool, for even more sustainability elective options!